

Declaration of Independence

IN CONGRESS JULY 4th. 1776.

The unanimous Declaration of the thirteen united States of America

When in the course of these events we found it necessary to declare the political bond which has connected these colonies with Great Britain, we have, among the people of the world, the opinion of God, and of the world, that we have done so.

We hold these truths to be self-evident, that all men are created equal, that they are endowed by their Creator with certain unalienable Rights, that among these are Life, Liberty and the pursuit of Happiness.

That to secure these rights, Governments are instituted among Men, deriving their just powers from the consent of the governed, that whenever any Form of Government becomes destructive of these ends, it is the Right of the People to alter or to abolish it, and to institute new Government, laying its foundation on such principles and organizing its powers in such form, as to them shall seem most likely to effect their Safety and Happiness. Prudence, indeed, dictates that Governments of long duration should not be changed for light and transient causes; and accordingly we have suffered our former Governments to exist till they have become destructive of these ends. Now, in the second year of the present year, we have found it necessary to declare the political bond which has connected these colonies with Great Britain, and to declare that we are free, independent States, united into one Nation.
