Stephanie Marshall, Heather Fry, Steve Ketteridge, 2014-08-21 This entirely new edition of a very successful book focuses on developing professional academic skills for supporting and supervising student learning and effective teaching It is built on the premise that the roles of those who teach in higher education are complex and multi faceted A Handbook for Teaching and Learning in Higher Education is sensitive to the competing demands of teaching research scholarship and academic management The new edition reflects and responds to the rapidly changing context of higher education and to current understanding of how to best support student learning Drawing together a large number of expert authors it continues to feature extensive use of case studies that show how successful teachers have implemented these ideas It includes key topics such as student engagement and motivation internationalisation employability inclusive strategies for teaching effective use of technology and issues relating to postgraduate students and student retention Part 1 explores a number of aspects of the context of UK higher education that affect the education of students looking at the drivers of institutional behaviours and how to achieve success as a university teacher Part 2 examines learning teaching and supervising in higher education and includes chapters on working with diversity encouraging independent learning and learning gain Part 3 considers approaches to teaching and learning in different disciplines covering a full range including arts and humanities social sciences experimental sciences through to medicine and dentistry Written to support the excellence in teaching and learning design required to bring about student learning of the highest quality this will be essential reading for all new lecturers particularly anyone taking an accredited course in teaching and learning in higher education as well as those experienced lecturers who wish to improve their teaching practice Those working in adult learning and educational development will also find the book to be a particularly useful resource In addition it will appeal to staff who support learning and teaching in various other roles

Teaching Academic Writing in European Higher Education Lennart Björk, Gerd Bräuer, L. Rienecker, Peter Stray Jørgensen, 2005-12-30 DAVID R RUSSELL English Department of Iowa State University U S A I was fortunate to attend as a visitor from the U S the first European Association for the Teaching of Academic Writing EATAW conference in 2001 at Groningen I was struck by the similarities in the challenges higher education faces on both sides of the Atlantic in terms of developing students academic writing and students learning through writing It is indeed an international problem But I was equally struck by the profound differences in responding to these challenges among institutions disciplines and even within disciplines The essays in this extraordinary volume address a growing demand for help with academic writing on the part of students and academic staff alike And they do so in ways that bring fresh approaches not only to Europeans who have only recently begun to study academic writing but also to researchers and academic staff in the U S where we have a century old tradition of attention to the problem but are much in need of these fresh approaches Academic writing has become a problem in higher education all around the world because higher education sits smack between two contradictory pressures On one end far more students and far more diverse students come streaming into higher education bringing in a far greater diversity of linguistic resources often interpreted as standards are falling as Frank Haacke Tente point out
