2002-2003 ,2003 The Franchise Cameron Stauth,1990 Stauth s account from inside the front office and the locker room of what makes a basketball franchise tick Famous Minnesotans Dan Flynn,2005 Minnesota is known for its harsh winters nice people and very large mosquitoes but the state has also been a breeding ground for talent as Dan Flynn makes clear in this fascinating collection of thumbnail biographies The Inside Game Wayne Embry,Mary Schmitt Boyer,2004 In the fall of 1999 Wayne Embry was so highly thought of by his peers that he was inducted into the Basketball Hall of Fame as a contributor to the game In the summer of 1999 the Cleveland Cavaliers thought so little of him that they replaced him as general manager Now in his new autobiography The Inside Game Embry who was once sent home from a game in the old Richfield Coliseum when a bullet was found on his seat tells the inside story of his fall from grace and the part he believes racism played in it He deals with the unsavory dealings that led to his departure from the Cavs and introduces startling information about one of the most highly regarded coaches in the league He discusses the social and economic changes affecting the league and other problems threatening to destroy it What Embry most wants is to provide inspiration not only to those in the sports world but to those in the worlds of business and education where he has demonstrated leadership time and time again His book is part historical perspective part inside look behind the scenes part business strategy and part social commentary all told in a straightforward style sprinkled with humorous anecdotes It is a virtual guide for how to develop and maintain successful intra personal relationships Information, School Choice, and Academic Achievement Justine S. Hastings,Jeffrey Weinstein,2007 There is growing empirical evidence that low income parents place lower weights on academics when choosing schools implying that school choice plans may have the smallest impact on the choices of the families they are targeting This paper uses a natural experiment generated by the 2004 implementation of the No Child Left Behind Act in the Charlotte Mecklenburg Public School District CMS and a field experiment we designed and implemented as part of the district's 2006 school choice plan to examine how transparent information on school level academic performance affects the test scores of the schools parents choose and the subsequent impact on their children's academic outcomes We find in both cases that providing parents with transparent information on the academic achievement at schools with their school choice forms results in significantly more parents choosing substantially higher performing schools We then use instrumental variables approaches exploiting random variation generated by each experiment in the test score of the school attended to estimate the impact of attending a higher scoring school on student academic outcomes We find that attending higher performing schools results in significant increases in their children's standardized test scores at the end of the first year If the results we find represent permanent increases in student level test scores they suggest a small policy change that lowers information or decision making costs for these parents had a substantial monetary impact on their children's lifetime earnings adding to growing evidence that small changes in information can greatly affect choices program participation and outcomes
