Fifty Years and Other Poems James Weldon Johnson, 2013-12 Of the hundred millions who make up the population of the United States ten millions come from a stock ethnically alien to the other ninety millions They are not descended from ancestors who came here voluntarily in the spirit of adventure to better themselves or in the spirit of devotion to make sure of freedom to worship God in their own way They are the grandchildren of men and women brought here against their wills to serve as slaves It is only half a century since they received their freedom and since they were at last permitted to own themselves They are now American citizens with the rights and the duties of other American citizens and they know no language no literature and no law other than those of their fellow citizens of Anglo Saxon ancestry
