professionals wishing to learn more about the distinctive features of this important therapy The Behavior Therapist, 2008 Beck's Cognitive Therapy Frank Wills, 2009 First Published in 2009 Routledge is an imprint of Taylor Francis an informa company Functional Analytic Psychotherapy Robert J. Kohlenberg, Mavis Tsai, 2007-06-26 Now in paperback this classic book offers a powerful framework for clinicians seeking to rethink their approach to the therapeutic relationship It begins with the theory behind Functional Analytic Psychotherapy FAP explaining why clients unique needs may extend beyond well mapped routes to change From there the authors present the clinical principles of FAP and their uses in treating diffuse resistant problems Abnormal Psychology Lauren B. Alloy, Neil S. Jacobson, Joan Ross Acocella, 1999 Presents current perspectives and research on all psychological disorders This edition of the text features discussion on antisocial personality disorder rape and domestic violence A Groups at risk section highlights differences in prevalence by gender race and socioeconomic status Demonstrating Functional Analytic Psychotherapy as an Independent Variable in Efficacy Research Lindsey E. Knott, 2018 Functional Analytic Psychotherapy FAP is a contextual behavior therapy that takes an in session in vivo focus to improve client outcomes This in vivo IV focus is distinctive of FAP and involves the therapist utilization of contingencies in session to decrease problematic response classes and increase more adaptive response classes i e a differential reinforcement procedure This contingent responding is proposed to be FAP's mechanism of action leading to client change FAP efficacy research mainly consists of small n single case studies or group designs combining FAP with another CBT intervention Maitland Maitland et al 2016 and it distinguished FAP from SL sessions suggesting potential utility in distinguishing FAP as an independent variable The present study using the data from Maitland et al 2016 provides a more comprehensive analysis by assessing reliability between 3 independent coders correlations with another FAP specific fidelity metric and investigating for possible mediator relationships between the FAP AF and outcomes The alternative fidelity technique used for comparison was developed by Kanter Schildcrout Kohlenberg 2005 and involves coding each turn of speech as in vivo talk directed at the therapy process therapy relationship or in the moment interactions or not If the FAP AF and in vivo counts capture the presence or absence of FAP elements they should be reliable across coders Likewise the in vivo turns count should correlate with the 5 item FAP scale on the FAP AF but neither should correlate with the 4 item SL scale distinguishing FAP from SL Finally if the FAP AF acts as a proxy for FAP's mechanism of action it should mediate outcomes Results demonstrated mostly excellent reliability between coders Exact agreement on the FAP scale items ranged from 71% to 95% Inter method correlations indicated strong positive relationships between and within coders on the adherence metrics Furthermore the FAP scale and IV turns count significantly differed in FAP sessions compared to SL sessions suggesting the measures distinguished the presence of FAP from its absence As such the FAP scale may be useful in documenting FAP as an independent variable providing a reliable but less intensive method for assessing treatment fidelity However no adherence metrics replicated Maitland et al 2016 in serving as a statistical mediator of outcomes The individual level relationships observed between adherence and symptom outcomes suggested significant variability and an absence of an overall dose response relationship The lack of a clear dose response relationship could indicate a limitation of the adherence measures used Not all FAP interactions are equal in their potency an effect which is hard to quantify Implications future directions and limitations are discussed Index to Theses with Abstracts Accepted for Higher Degrees by the
