Environmental Security in the

Anthropocene Judith Nora Hardt, 2017-09-22 This book provides a critical assessment of the theories and practice of environmental security in the context of the Anthropocene. The work analyses the intellectual foundations, the evolution and different interpretations, strengths and potential of the link between environment and security but also its weaknesses, incoherencies and distortions. To do so it employs a critical environmental security studies analytical framework and uniquely places this analysis within the context of the Anthropocene. Furthermore, the book examines the practice, theory divide and the political implementation of the environmental security concept in response to global environmental change and in relation to different actors. It pays significant attention to the Environment and Security Initiative ENVSEC which is led by different programs of the United Nations, the OSCE and until recently by the North Atlantic Treaty Organization NATO among others and has largely been overlooked in the academic literature to date. The goal is to study how environmental security practice could inform and shape the environmental security theory and also to explore how conversely new theoretical insights could contribute to the enhancement of environmental security activities. This book will be of great interest to students and academic scholars of Environmental Security, Critical Security Studies, Green Political Theory, Global Governance and International Relations in general. Gender and environmental security Nathaniel Stevenson

Odusola, 2020-09-08 Research Paper postgraduate from the year 2018 in the subject Gender Studies grade 100 course Governance and Public Policy language English abstract This research essay examined the experiences of women as regards environmental insecurity as well as the gendered ideas of virtue and vulnerability on climate change. The argument that men's activities are more harmful to the environment is valid because men are adventurous. They develop all the different forms of technologies that hurt the environment. Whereas women are virtuous because they are sensitive to the environmental impact of humankind, thus they are always on the lookout for new ways to protect the environment from degradation. The fact that women are less empowered, particularly in under developed nations, makes them vulnerable to the adverse effect of climate change. This aspect of the society where women have no voice in the decision making of the society makes women vulnerable to the outcome of the policy adopted by the male counterparts. That is the reason analysts and policymakers alike are calling for policy mainstreaming on climate change that puts the women at the forefront of policy formulation and administration. The consequence of not allowing women to take part in policy formulation and administration concerning the environment is that any policy made concerning climate change would be ineffective as the male counterparts would not be able to relate issues that affect the women adequately. The various school of thoughts that argued for and against the adverse impact of environmental degradation against women acknowledge the fact that women are vulnerable. The less developed nations are the worse affected because they lack the relevant technology to manage the impact of climate change. Another reason for the impact of climate change has to do with being unable to manage conflict. The challenges that women face climate change have to do with water management, the effect that the environment encounter cannot be underestimated when analyzed.

alongside the hardship it brings to women The impact of climate change affects the supply of water apart from other health implications that climate change has on society Women are vulnerable to environmental difficulties The argument that women are more environmentally virtuous and can predict the climate more efficiently is valid Coping with Global Environmental Change, Disasters and Security Hans Günter Brauch, Úrsula Oswald Spring, Czeslaw Mesjasz, John Grin, Patricia Kameri-Mbote, Béchir Chourou, Pál Dunay, Joern Birkmann, 2011-02-03 Coping with Global Environmental Change Disasters and Security Threats Challenges Vulnerabilities and Risks reviews conceptual debates and case studies focusing on disasters and security threats challenges vulnerabilities and risks in Europe the Mediterranean and other regions It discusses social science concepts of vulnerability and risks global regional and national security challenges global warming floods desertification and drought as environmental security challenges water and food security challenges and vulnerabilities vulnerability mapping of environmental security challenges and risks contributions of remote sensing to the recognition of security risks mainstreaming early warning of conflicts and hazards and provides conceptual and policy conclusions Human Security and Natural Disasters Christopher Hobson, Paul Bacon, Robin Cameron, 2014-03-26 Human security is an approach that rejects the traditional prioritization of state security and instead identifies the individual as the primary referent of security It offers a way of broadening our perspective and recognizing that the most pressing threats to individuals do not come from interstate war but from the emergencies that affect people every day such as famine disease displacement civil conflict and environmental degradation Human security is about people living their lives with dignity being free from fear and want To date there has been a strong tendency to focus on insecurity caused by civil conflict with less attention on issues to do with environmental security This volume addresses the threat posed by natural disasters which represent an increasingly major human security threat to people everywhere In looking at natural disasters this book also refines the human security approach It does so through developing its previously unexplored interdisciplinary potential This volume explicitly seeks to bring the human security approach into conversation with contributions from a range of disciplines development disaster sociology gender studies international law international relations philosophy and public health Collectively these scholars unpack the human element of natural disasters In doing so an emphasis is placed on how pre existing vulnerabilities can be gravely worsened as well as the interconnected nature of human security threats The book presents a variety of case studies that include the Indian Ocean tsunami Hurricane Katrina the 2010 Haiti earthquake and the 2011 triple disasters in Japan Earth at Risk in the 21st Century: Rethinking Peace, Environment, Gender, and Human, Water, Health, Food, Energy Security, and Migration Úrsula Oswald Spring, 2020-04-03 Earth at Risk in the 21st Century offers critical interdisciplinary reflections on peace security gender relations migration and the environment all of which are threatened by climate change with women and children affected most Deep rooted gender discrimination is also a result of the destructive exploitation of natural resources and the pollution of soils water biota and air In the Anthropocene

the management of human society and global resources has become unsustainable and has created multiple conflicts by increasing survival threats primarily for poor people in the Global South Alternative approaches to peace and security focusing from bottom up on an engendered peace with sustainability may help society and the environment to be managed in the highly fragile natural conditions of a hothouse Earth Thus the book explores systemic alternatives based on indigenous wisdom gift economy and the economy of solidarity in which an alternative cosmovision fosters mutual care between humankind and nature Special analysis of risks to the survival of humankind in the 21st century Interdisciplinary studies on peace security gender and environment related to global environmental and climate change Critical reflections on gender relations peace security migration and the environment Systematic analysis of food water health energy security and its nexus Alternative proposals from the Global South with indigenous wisdom for saving Mother Earth Gender and Disasters.
