

KEY B

Justification

Capacity Management success would depend to a great extent upon the availability of precise and timely business forecast, as indicated in the answer in Option B. The answers in other options are incorrect.

595. With reference to Capex & Opex, how can valuation of any business be improved ?
- A. Increasing Capex & proportionately reducing Opex
  - B. Reduction in Opex irrespective of impact on day-to-day operations
  - C. With Capex constant, reduction in Opex without hurting day-to-day operations
  - D. Increasing both Capex & Opex with the objective of increased profits

KEY C

Justification

In general, industry prefers to restrict Capex & also optimize Opex to get best results for stakeholders. Capex is considered undesirable owing to restrictions on dividend cost being allowed as a business cost for tax purposes unlike Opex. However reduction in Opex can hurt operations too, leading to reduced profits. Hence, the ideal situation would be, while Capex is kept constant, Opex is reduced without hurting day-to-operations, as indicated in Option C above. The answers in other Options are incorrect.
